Jaromír Funke. Born in 1896, Funke was at the top of his career during the 20s and 30s. At a time when photography was still in its infancy, Funke created magical photographs using mirrors and lights to “design” abstract images that were both surrealist and poetic. Along with two other photographers, Funke founded the Czech Photographic Society in 1924, officially giving artists a place to congregate and talk about their images.
